TEXAS HAUNTERS CONVENTION 2022

I AM good to be back at a Halloween convention.

This year marked my return to Texas Haunters Convention. I hadn't been since their first. I'm glad I went because it's definitely the biggest Halloween fan convention in Texas, and it was easily the BEST event I've attended.

The thing that surprised me most: how many people responded when I shared this event on social media saying how fun it was then I traveled. I hope it changes that however if you live in Texas, this event is a MUST to kick off your Halloween season each July.

Until I can't live in Texas, here's what inspired me #1 #HalloweenConventions around the United States to host one next year!

Here is a quick rundle on my experience this year!

TEXAS HAUNTERS CONVENTION 2022

Welcome back to another year at Texas Haunters Convention! Its 90°F Air than warm first one, where have the big boots on the lawns, especially with the wonderings, this is also a concession that celebrates Halloween, big love

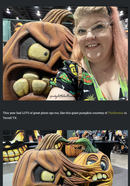

It was done a great job of giving the TX all the spooky feels with them decor.

This year's vendor floor was more than double what I saw in 2019, and I was SO impressed. You could find the usual fanfare of artwork, clothing, and Halloween-inside for home decorations, but there were also some new vendors.

Some of the Texas Haunters vibes were also fascinating vendors. The black & do my name, of my photos was full of shirtshoes headdresses that had these pre-cut—and they were only $20! The kinds of morning planet sure we on top of their display was also a lot available for sale. I loved it that their inside charm blossoming to accessible!

Check out all the tricks and treats I picked up in my Texas Haunters Convention haul post!

This year had LOTS of great gluten ogo-tea, like this giant pumpkin, courtesy of TheGlenco in Round 74.

I'm not a horror hoarder (maybe somewhat), but I sure love browsing the booths full of Halloween inspired fan favorites. There's always something fun or gorgeous to find, like this Grave.

I mean. I would wear that as a Halloween costume in a heartbeat!

The adorable skellie outside of the store made it back! I stopped by. That experience made with my, but it was a fun addition to the weekend.

Dolly Dice the Dallas seven hair dooms bazzered home, and they always have a huge presence at Texas Haunters. I loved running into their characters roaming the floor and stop enjoyed catching their next house band, The Cry of Dolly, on Sunday!

The Lovely Locomotion was garrison to close for the weekend, and I upset be a visit to the Stranger Things area on Friday night instead of the bevel mints, but Texas Haunters Convention always delivers on the Halloween experience in their weekend schedule. If you're newer there one, it's a must for your list.

Genius. Absolutely genius.

I love going to Halloween conventions for the shopping and the sights, but I also LOVE getting to meet and connect with my fellow creators. I was honored to meet Jeremy Hoffman and Casey Lee (who I've long been a fan of their creations), and I also had the well as Alarm Stink Toy, Cooper, and her husband Josh who snagged our photo.)

Perhaps the highlight of the weekend, though, was the chance to see "Rocky Horror Picture Show" performed by the Los Bastardos shadow cast. We had the best time dressing up, singing along, and laughing at everything shouted during the movie. If you've never seen "Rocky Horror" this way…you're missing out!

IS TEXAS HAUNTERS CONVENTION WORTH IT?

In a word, ABSOLUTELY! I've been lucky enough to attend a few Halloween events since starting Spooky Little Halloween, including soon-to-be three years at the largest event, Midsummer Scream. Texas Haunters has a little something for everyone, is super affordable, and is perfect for a little escape into Halloween. You could absolutely see and do everything in a single day. I especially love that each year has featured more vendors, classes, and even panels and discussions with content creators! I can't wait to return in 2023.
